

Search sheets: how to run the activity

The pages after this one are 80 search sheets, built from Australia by Simple English Wikipedia contributors. Print them one-sided and hand out one sheet per person — every sheet is different, and nothing needs cutting out.

If the room is a different size, match it to the sheets rather than the other way round. More people than sheets: print the set twice and hand out both copies. Every token pair is then held by two people, so every count doubles and the proportions — which is all the model is — do not move. It buys some insurance too, because one person away no longer takes a token pair out of the room with them. Fewer people than sheets: give the spares out rather than leaving them on the table, two or three to a person if it comes to that. A sheet nobody holds is a hole in the model.

Each sheet holds 61–62 token pairs. A token is one word or one punctuation mark; a token pair is a next token paired with the previous token that came immediately before it somewhere in the original text.

In these native, the boxed token is the previous token and native is the next token. Each token keeps the same colour wherever it appears, so scan by colour first and read second. With only 8 colours and far more tokens than that, a colour narrows the search rather than settling it — always check the token itself.

Say the colour when you call a token out — “who has native? it’s a red one” — and most of the page stops being worth reading. The swatches are chosen to answer to these words, so the words are the ones to use; the sheets themselves print no key, because a strip of swatches at the top of a page of swatches is one more thing to scan past.

black grey red brown green blue purple magenta

Running a round

Seed the board first. Ask someone to read out any token pair from their sheet — both tokens, boxed one first — and write it up. It matters that the opening comes off a sheet rather than out of your head: the room supplies the beginning as well as everything after it. Then, each round:

1. Call out the last token of the text so far.
2. Everyone scans their own sheet for token pairs whose previous token matches. Hands up — one hand each, and anyone with more than one match just goes with the first they spot.
3. Pick a raised hand at random and ask for that token pair’s next token.

4. A scribe writes the token on the board. That token becomes part of the context for the next round. Repeat.

Picking at random matters. If you take whoever shouts first you are sampling the fastest reader, not the text — and the whole point is that the room samples the way the model does.

What to watch for

The hands are the probability distribution. Every token pair was dealt to exactly one person, and the deal spreads each context across as many people as it will go, so a common continuation really does put more hands in the air than a rare one. Nobody has to explain weighted sampling; the room performs it. (Roughly: for a context more common than the class is big, somebody holds two matches but raises one hand, which flattens the busiest contexts.)

Nobody holds the model. No single sheet can continue the text on its own. The model only exists across the whole room — and if somebody is away, their share of it is missing, and some contexts will draw no hands at all.

Quiet rounds. One hand is not a stall — a word with a single continuation is the model working. Nor will you run dry: a word has nothing following it only if it appears nowhere but the very last position in the text, which is at most one word in the whole deal. So no hands at all almost always means an empty seat — two of them, if you printed the set twice — and that is worth saying out loud. Reseed from any token pair and carry on.

5057 tokens, 1224 unique · 3.18 bits/token · perplexity 9 · branching factor 2.91

Worked example

Start anywhere. Pick any token pair — say this one — and write its previous token and its next token on the board.

Round 1. Call out the last token on the board (native). Another sheet has a match, so that person raises a hand and reads out Australians.

Round 2. Call out the last token on the board (Australians). Another sheet has a match, so that person raises a hand and reads out and.

Keep going for as long as you like. The text the room writes will sound like Australia without ever repeating it — that is the model generating, not the corpus being read out.
